

Thirty-Year Experience of Chinese government:

Review on China's Policies for Chinese Students Going Abroad

Cheng, Xi (程希)

Chinese Institute for Overseas Chinese History Studies, Beijing, China

This paper reviews on some periods of Chinese students who have gone abroad with government fund or personal financial support since China's reform, meanwhile it has a discussion about China's policies for Chinese students going abroad. It argues China's policies for Chinese students going abroad and returning has reflected the developing of China's reform. China's policies for Chinese students going abroad show the opening degree and scale of Chinese international education. On the other hand, the policies about overseas Chinese students returning show the power and direction of the reform on human resources system and labor market. Policies for Chinese students going abroad have two parts: one refers to Chinese government fund support, the other refers to personal financial support. Policies for going abroad with Chinese government fund support belong to "plan system". They are being made more and more "open, fair and justice" although total sum, students structure and applicant procedure could be changed at different period. Policies for going abroad with personal financial support could be seen the control to personnel mobility is being more and more relaxation and freedom.