

The Way the Malaysian Chinese to Understand China: the case study of “Kwong Wah Jit Poh”

Lee ,Chin Chen ( 李政贤 )

Institute of politics research ,National Taiwan University , Taiwan.

After May 13 incident in 1969, the rights and interests of the Malaysian Chinese have been continually threatened by Malay-centered government, so that the Chinese in Malaysia have a strong sense of anxiety and uncertainty. In order to get rid of the disadvantage situation, the Chinese community began to think about how to consolidate the power of the Chinese. They tried to make use of Chinese newspapers as a means of communication and education among ethnic Chinese to fight for all of the Malaysian Chinese. Because Malaysian Chinese are the Chinese Diaspora, their ethnic homeland is China. The author would like to study the Chinese newspaper --“Kwong Wah Yit Poh” to see how Malaysian Chinese treat the related topics concerning China in this newspaper, and then explore the way the Malaysian Chinese to understand China. The research questions will include how the Malaysian Chinese imagine China? After a period of time, what do Malaysian Chinese identities change?